Dietary Guidelines for Mediterranean Diet

The Mediterranean diet is one of the most healthy diets. It focuses on consuming nutrient-dense foods without counting calories or eliminating any specific foods. We exercise dairy and poultry in lesser amounts. However, this “diet” is not regulated, like numerous fad diets;

Traditionally, communities living in the Mediterranean have prioritized physical activity, social interaction, and relaxation, besides moderate wine consumption. The U.S. defines consumption of wine as five ounces or less daily for women (about one glass) and ten ounces or less daily for men.
